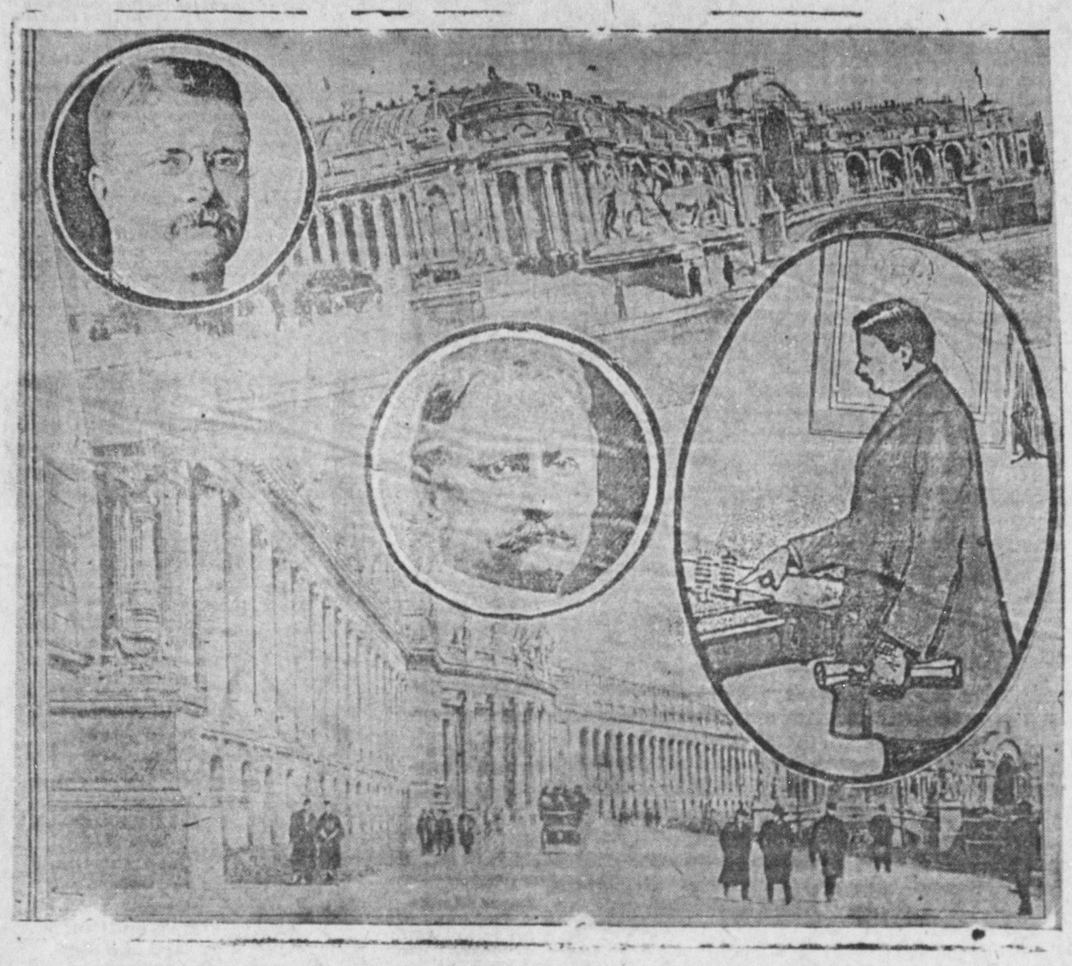
VOL. XXXVII BELLEFONTE, PA., THURSDAY MORNING, MAY 5, 1904. NO. 14



Above is depicted to-day's big news story of President Roosevelt from the White House opening the great St. Louis Fair. President Francis who is the most important official on the scene of the opening is also shown together with the two most comprehensive views of the fair.

WORLD'S FAIR AT St. LOUIS

Louisiana Purchase Exposition Opened Saturday.

PROMISES MADE GOOD

President Roosevelt at the White House Pressed the Button at 1 O'clock which Set the Machinery in Motion.

GREAT ENTHUSIASM MANIFESTED.

St. Louis, Mo., April 30.—President Roosevelt touched an electric button in Washington today. As he did so the report of a cannon was heard here by the expectant multitude, flags unfurled as if by magic, an avalanche of water poured down the cascades, the great engines in the machinery palace and power houses started throbbing—and the Louisiana Purchase Exposition was open to the world.

The opening ceremonies were so simple and so plain that they were in perfect harmony with the methods of President Francis and his efficient aids, but they were at the same time very impressive, and made a fitting prelude to one of the most memorable events in American history. The dedication ceremonies, a year ago, were attended by a military pageant that was significant of the nation's prowess, and after the baptism of arms comes the sweet presence of art and science, and the formal opening today was marked by the absence of soldiery in uniform.

The place of rendezvous was the great plaza to the north of the Grand Basin and in the shadow of the imposing Louisiana Purchase Monument. At 9 o'clock the board of directors of the fair, the members of the national commission, the board of lady managers and other officials met in the Administration Building, where there was an interesting little ceremony as a prelude to the more important events of the day. This consisted of the presentation to President Francis of a gavel with which to call to order the assemblage of notables. The gavel was made of many pieces of wood taken from various trees grown in the Forest Park portion of the exposition grounds.

Pres. Francis and his party were escorted from the Administration Building to the scene of the day's ceremonies, where they were joined by the foreign commissioners, who had assembled earlier at the British pavilion, and the Governors of States and State commissions and committees who had rounded up at the United States Government Building. Secretary Taft, as the representative of President Roosevelt, was escorted to the grounds by a military guard, and proper escorts were furnished also to the members of Congress and other specially invited guests.

Promptly at half-past ten the exercises of the day began. There was little formality, hardly any display to attract the seekers of the picturesque, and still the program was carried out amid surroundings and in a manner in all ways appropriate. The ceremonies were opened with an invocation by the Rev. Frank W. Gunsaulus, of Chicago. The invocation was followed by the rendering of "America" by the bands and an address by the Hon. D. R. Francis, president of the exposition. President Francis was given a great ovation In a brief address, he reviewed the history of the exposition enterprise from its inception to the supreme moment now at hand, eulogizing the work of the colleagues and praising the public spirit of the citizens of St. Louis in general. He set forth the objects of the exposition to be to commemorate the past, present the advantages of the present, and inspire hope to the future—the past, the present, the future of America and the whole world. Loud and continuous cheering followed the conclusion of President Francis' remarks, and the band struck up "The Star-Spangled Banner" amid tumultuous cheering and waiving of hats and handkerchiefs.

William H. Thompson, chairman of the committee on grounds and buildings introduced Isaac L. Taylor, director of works. He said that he had worked many months on his speech, and that in delivering it he would deliver the keys of the buildings to President Francis, which he did. The transfer of the exhibit palaces to F. J. V. Skiff, director of exhibits, was then made.

Addresses followed by Thomas H. Carter, president of the national commission; E. H. Harriman, speaking on behalf of domestic exhibitors, and by representatives of the congressional and other committees that have had much to do with the affairs of the enterprise.

As Secretary Taft stepped forward to deliver the oration of the day the volume of applause shook the very firmament, and it was at once seen that the multitude regarded the Secretary of War as the central figure of the day's exercises. Secretary Taft's address was brief and very characteristic of the man, who is known to be as modest as he is able.

When these formalities were concluded there came a scene that was notable for its intense impressiveness. President Francis stepped to the front of the stand and faced the expectant multitude. It was a few minutes past the noon hour, and these words came from the clearest of voices:

"Ladies and gentlemen: I will now dictate a telegram:

"To the President of the United States of America, Washington, D. C.: The representatives of the nations send greetings, and request that you put in motion the machinery of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition."

A few feet away sat the telegraph operator who sent every word as it fell from the lips of the speaker, who paused at the end of every few words.

The vast audience was touched as it had not been by anything else that had happened during the opening exercises. The clicking of the telegraph instrument was heard by all within a radius of many feet, so silent and noiseless was the vast throng. One could easily imagine what was going on at the other end of the wire at the nation's capitol. No one spoke or moved. A minute passed by. Then a few seconds more of stillness, that told that the hearts of these people were in the right place and then, as the tension was growing stronger and more significant, the report of a cannon was heard, the people jumped, applauded, shouted, frantically waved their hats and handkerchiefs and gave every other indication of rare delight.

The band played, every one shook hands with his neighbor, with the notable present, and fairly mobbed President Francis and the other officials and directors who had made the scene possible. Those who lingered about the speakers' stand heard read the telegrams of congratulation exchanged between President Roosevelt and President Francis. The majority of the multitude, however, were up and gone, eager to see what the great exposition looked like now that it was really an accomplished fact.

Following the conclusion of the opening ceremonies the denizens of "The Pike" had their "innings." There was a parade of all nations just to make known the fact that the great amusement feature of the exposition was opened to the world and prepared to furnish entertainment to all comers for the next six months. Every clime was represented in the picturesque pageant that wound about the exposition grounds starting from the Administration Plaza and marching and countermarching through the principal avenues of the Ivory City.

Death of Little Marie Young.

Lona Marie, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Young, formerly of Bellefonte, died at their home at Point Lookout, Thursday morning, of pneumonia, aged 3 years, 4 months and 18 days. Little Marie was a bright and interesting child and was the idol of its parents and its happy face and babyish chatter will be sadly missed in the household, but its spirit has gone to the Master who gave it and is free from suffering and cares of this life. The bereaved parents have the sympathy of many friends. The funeral took place Saturday.

IDDINGS VS BOGGS TWP

This Damage Suit Was the Most Important Case Tried During the Week—Verdict for the Plaintiff

REPORTED BY W. HARRISON WALKER

The Court handed down an opinion in the case of William Witmer versus Dora Witmer and James Witmer which was tried at November term of Court 1903 in which he refused a new trial. The case was decided in favor of the defendants at the trial.

The Court also handed down Friday afternoon six road and bridge petitions on which he made the appointment of the following persons as viewers.

Petition for County Bridge over the Race, near P. R. R. Depot in Bellefonte Pa., A. A. Dale, Esq., was appointed Surveyor and Potter Tate and Benjamin Gentzel viewers.

Another petition was presented by the citizens of Howard and Curtin Townships for the vacation of a public road leading from Morrison Watkins to Stone Hollow on which the Court appointed D. W. Pletcher Surveyor, Randolph Pletcher and Harry McDowell viewers. At last Argument Court the Court handed down an opinion in which the proceedings to have this same road vacated were set aside.

The second week of Court convened Monday morning with Hon. John G. Love P. J. on the bench, and Prothonotary Gardner and Register Archey in their usual places. G. S. Burrows, Esq., of Sunbury, Pa., the official stenographer reported for duty Monday morning.

The list of cases for trial were sifted out Monday forenoon and it appeared that only two cases were ready. The balance of the forenoon session was taken up in the presentation of motions and petition by the several attorneys at the Bar.

The case of James P. Odenkirk, use of J. T. Tyler versus Nancy Benner, which was an action of assumpsit, Plea non assumpsit, was settled by the parties.

A verdict was taken in the case of Marulla Dawson versus Cornelius Bland, admr of etc., of Eliza Bland, deceased, Cornelius Bland who survives Eliza Bland, co-obliger in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendants in the sum of $328.00. This was a sci. fa. sur. Mortgage, Plea non assumpsit.

The most important case on trial during the week was that of Philip B. Iddings and Hannah N. Iddings versus Boggs Township. This was an action of trespass to recover damages from Boggs Township for injuries received by both plaintiffs by reason of their falling over the high embankment below Nail works on the evening of Feb. 21st 1901.

From the evidence in the case it appeared that on the 21st of Feb. 1901 the two plaintiffs drove to Bellefonte in a spring wagon, and on their way home their horses scared at something and backed, backing the hind wheel of their wagon over the bank. Mr. Iddings testified that he took the end of his lines and struck the "off side horse" thinking that they would pull them up, when the pin which connects the doubletree to the tong of the wagon broke, or fell out and the wagon then went down over the bank a distance of about 23 feet. The horses pulled Mr. Iddings out of the wagon but Mrs. Iddings could not get out and fell the entire distance landing on the R. R. tracks below. When she was found, she was in an unconscious condition, and remained so for some time.

Mrs. Iddings died some time last March at the Bellefonte Hospital. From the evidence on part of plaintiff they tried to produce witnesses to testified that the cause of her death was due to the accident of 1901. Under the pleadings in the case however there could be no recover for any damages after the death of Mrs. Iddings by her husband who was substituted as administrator for his wife, in this case, and the Court so charged the jury.

After the plaintiffs had closed their case the defendants moved for a compulsory non suit on the grounds that the breaking of the bolt or pin was the direct cause of the accident and over which the [illegible] therefore should not be held liable. The Court after considerable argument by Counsel for both parties, refused the motion, and the case was allowed to go to the jury.

The line of the defense was that the accident happened in Spring Township and not in Boggs. In support of this theory they offered in advance several drafts of the supposed lines between the two townships and papers in proceedings in Court since 1814.

The line between the townships has been in dispute for many years and at the most dangerous place, both townships refused to build guardrails for a distance of 200 feet or more, neither of them conceding or willing to concede that the line was where it was afterwards, or since the accident found to be by a view held in 1902.

After argument by Counsel and the charge of the Court the case was handed over to the jury at about five o'clock Tuesday evening, and at 7, they agreed upon a verdict which was sealed and opened by the Court Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock. The jury found in favor of the plaintiff, Philip B. Iddings the sum of $474.33, and for Philip B. Iddings as administrator of Hannah N. Iddings, deceased the sum of $352.09, making a total of $826 41

It might be well for township supervisors to place guard rails along dangerous points as well as on bridges. Doing this they will save the townships they represent endless cost and expense by reason of accidents which are likely to occur at any time at dangerous points.

The last case on the list for trial is that of John T. Bayletts versus J. J. Kelley and William Nyman Jr., being an action of Trespass.

The jurors were all discharged, with the exception of the ones that were empanneled on the last case Tuesday evening.

Death of Mrs. Frank G. Harris.

The sad news has been received at the family home in Clearfield announcing the death of Mrs. Elizabeth, wife of State Treasurer Frank G. Harris, which occurred in the Medico-Chirurgical hospital, Philadelphia, at 3 o'clock Sunday morning. Mrs. Harris had been practically an invalid for several years and for the past eight weeks has been a patient in the Philadelphia institution, undergoing an operation a few days ago for cancer. The deceased was aged about 55 years, a member of the M. E. church and a most excellent lady.

RUSSIANS MET DEFEAT

Fierce Fighting Between the Japs and Russians.

ALONG THE YALU RIVER

Present Position an Excellent One—Russians May be Forced to Abandon Defenses at Antung and Other Points.

SUNDAY A DAY OF BATTLE.

TOKIO, May 2.—(7 a. m. Monday)—The Japanese losses on the Yalu Sunday were about 700 killed and wounded. The Russians lost over 800 men. The Japanese captured 28 quick-firing guns, 20 officers and many men. The Russians made two stands.

Tokio, May 1.—(7 p. m.)—after five days of fighting, largely with artillery, the First Japanese army under General Kuroki has forced a crossing of the Yalu river and today, with a gallant infantry charge, covering a frontage of four miles, it drove the Russians from Chiu-Tien-Cheng and the heights on the right bank of the Iho or Aida river, which enters the Yalu from the north almost opposite Wiju. The Japanese turned the left flank of the Russian position and in the battle of yesterday they swept away the new front interposed by the Russians to check their onward movement.

JAPS IN DOMINATING POSITION.

The present position of the Japanese is a dominating one and they may force the abandonment of the defences erected by the Russians at Antung and other points lower down the river.

General Kuroki began the movement on Tuesday by ordering a detachment of Imperial Guards division to seize the Island of Kurito, which is in the Yalu above Wiju and a detachment of the Second division to seize the Island of Kinteito, which is situated below Wiju.

The detachment of the Imperial Guards met with some resistance, but it succeeded in clearing the enemy out and occupied Kurito Island. The Russians abandoned the Island of Kintito when attacked by the detachment of the Second division.

During these movements on the islands, the Russians opened fire on the Japanese with eight 9½-centimetre guns from a hill behind Chiu-Tien-Cheng, and two Hotchkiss guns which were mounted on the bank of the river at Kosan, where the Russians seemed to have established their headquarters.

The Russians resumed their bombardment on Thursday, but it was generally ineffective. The Russians resumed the shelling of Wiju on Friday, but the Japanese guns did not reply.

The 12th division of the Japanese army was chosen to make the first crossing of the Yalu. It begun its preparations on Friday by driving the Russians from their position on the bank of the river opposite Suikochin, which is eight miles above Wiju, and the point selected for the crossing. This division constructed a pontoon bridge over the river and at 3 o'clock Saturday morning it began crossing. The entire division passed over the river during the day and by 6 o'clock Saturday evening it was in the position assigned to it for the battle of Sunday.

All throught Saturday night regiment after regiment of Japanese soldiers poured across the bridge and at a late hour Saturday night General Kuroki telegraphed to the general staff of the army:

"I will attack the enemy on May 1 at dawn."

True to his promise, General Kuroki at daylight Sunday centered all his artillery on the Russian position between Chiu-Tien-Cheng and Yoshoko. To this fire, the Russians made reply with all their batteries.

At 7 o'clock in the morning the Russian battery at Yoshoko was silenced, and half an hour later General Kuroki ordered his line, stretching for four miles, to attack.

The Japanese infantry, on the word of command, charged across the Iho, wading that stream breast deep and began storming the heights at fifteen minutes past eight.

At nine o'clock they had swept the Russian line back across the plateau.

No report has been received in Tokio concerning the losses sustained by the Japanese in the fighting of Sunday. It is believed that these losses were heavy, particularly during the infantry charge.

CONTINUED.

"What now?" shouted Moran, coming forward to meet them, her scowl knotting her flashing eyes together. "Is this ship yours or mine? We've done your dirty work for you. I want you clear of my deck." Wilbur stood at her side, uncertain what to do, but ready for anything she should attempt.

"I tink you catchum somet'ing, smellum pretty big," said Hoang, his ferret glance twinkling about the schooner.

"I catchum nothing—nothing but plenty bad stink," said Moran. "No, you don't!" she exclaimed, putting herself in Hoang's way as he made for the cabin. The other beachcombers came crowding up. Wilbur even thought he saw one of them loosening his hatchet in his belt.

"This ship's mine!" cried Moran, backing to the cabin door. Wilbur followed her, and the Chinamen closed down upon the pair.

"It's not much use, Moran," he muttered. "They'll rush us in a minute."

"But the ambergris is mine—is mine," she answered, never taking her eyes from the confronting coolies.

"We findum w'ale," said Hoang. "You no find w'ale. Him b'long to we—eve'yt'ing in um w'ale b'long to we, savvy?"

"No; you promised us a third of everything you found."

Even in the confusion of the moment it occurred to Wilbur that it was quite possible that at least two-thirds of the ambergris did belong to the beachcombers by right of discovery. After all, it was the beachcombers who had found the whale. He could never remember afterward whether or no he said as much to Moran at the time. If he did, she had been deaf to it. A fury of wrath and desperation suddenly blazed in her blue eyes. Standing at her side, Wilbur could hear her teeth grinding upon each other. She was blind to all danger, animated only by a sense of injustice and imposition.

Hoang uttered a sentence in Cantonese. One of the coolies jumped forward, and Moran's fist met him in the face and brought him to his knees. Then came the rush Wilbur had foreseen. He had just time to catch a sight of Moran at grapples with Hoang when a little hatchet glinted over his head. He struck out savagely into the thick of the group—and then opened his eyes to find Moran washing the blood from his hair as he lay on the deck with his head in the hollow of her arm. Everything was quiet. The beachcombers were gone.

"Hello! What—what—what is it?" he asked, springing to his feet, his head swimming and smarting. "We had a row, didn't we? Did they hurt you? Oh, I remember. I got a cut over the head—one of the hatchet men. Did they hurt you?"

"They got the loot," she growled. "Filthy vermin! And, just to make everything pleasant, the schooner's sinking."

CHAPTER VIII.

"SINKING!" exclaimed Wilbur.

Moran was already on her feet. "We'll have to beach her," she cried, "and we're six miles out! Up y'r jib, mate!" The two set the jib, flying jib and staysails.

The fore and main sails were already drawing, and under all the spread of her canvas the Bertha raced back toward the shore.

But by the time she was within the head of the bay her stern had settled to such an extent that the forefoot was clear of the water, the bowsprit pointing high into the heavens. Moran was at the wheel, her scowl thicker than ever, her eyes measuring the strength of water that lay between the schooner and the shore.

"She'll never make it in the world," she muttered as she listened to the wash of the water in the cabin under her feet. In the hold empty barrels were afloat, knocking hollowly against each other. "We're in a bad way, mate."

"If it comes to that," returned Wilbur, surprised to see her thus easily downcast who was usually so indomitable—"if it comes to that, we can swim for it—a couple of planks"—

"Swim?" she echoed. "I'm not thinking of that. Of course we could swim."

"What then?"

"The sharks!"

Wilbur's teeth clicked sharply together. He could think of nothing to say.

As the water gained between decks the schooner's speed dwindled, and at the same time as she approached the shore the wind, shut off by the land, fell away. By this time the ocean was not four inches below the stern rail. Two miles away was the nearest sand spit. Wilbur broke out a distress signal on the foremast in the hope that Charlie and the deserters might send off the dory to their assistance, but the deserters were nowhere in sight.

"What became of the junk?" he demanded suddenly of Moran. She motioned to the westward with her head. "Still lying outside."

Twenty minutes passed. Once only Moran spoke.

"When she begins to go," she said, "she'll go with a rush. Jump pretty wide, or you'll get caught in the suction."

The two had given up all hope. Moran held grimly to the wheel as a mere matter of form. Wilbur stood at her side, his clinched fists thrust into his pockets. The eyes of both were fixed on the yellow line of the distant beach. By and by Moran turned to him with an odd smile.

"We're a strange pair to die together," she said. Wilbur met her eyes an instant, but, finding no reply, put his chin in the air as though he would have told her she might well say that.

"A strange pair to die together," Moran repeated, "but we can do that better than we could have"—she looked away from him—"could have lived together," she finished and smiled again.

"And yet," said Wilbur, "these last few weeks here on board the schooner we have been through a good deal—together. I don't know," he went on clumsily—"I don't know when I've been—when I've had—I've been happier than these last weeks. It is queer, isn't it? I know, of course, what you'll say. I've said it to myself often of late. I belong to the city and to my life there, and you—you belong to the ocean. I never knew a girl like you—never knew a girl could be like you. You don't know how extraordinary it all seems to me. You swear like a man, and you dress like a man, and I don't suppose you've ever been associated with other women, and you're strong—I know you are as strong as I am. You have no idea how different you are from the kind of girl I've known. Imagine my kind of girl standing up before [illegible] and those [illegible] hatchets. Maybe it's because you are so unlike my kind of girl that—that things are as they are with me. I don't know. It's a queer situation. A month or so ago I was at a tea in San Francisco, and now I'm aboard a shark fishing schooner sinking in Magdalena bay, and I'm with a girl that—that I—that I—well, I'm with you, and, well, you know how it is—I might as well say it—I love you more than I imagined I ever could love a girl."

Moran's frown came back to her forehead.

"I don't like that kind of talk," she said. "I am not used to it, and I don't know how to take it. Believe me," she said, with a half laugh, "it's all wasted. I never could love a man. I'm not made for men."

"No," said Wilbur, "nor for other women either."

"Nor for other women either."

Wilbur fell silent. In that instant he had a distinct vision of Moran's life and character, shunning men and shunned of women, a strange, lonely creature, solitary as the ocean whereon she lived; beautiful after her fashion; as yet without sex, proud, untamed, splendid in her savage, primal independence—a thing untouched and unsullied by civilization. She seemed to him some Bradamante, some mythical Brunehild, some Valkyrie of the legends born out of season, lost and unfamiliar in this end of the century time. Her purity was the purity of primeval glaciers. He could easily see how to such a girl the love of a man would appear only in the light of a humiliation—a degradation. And yet she could love, else how had he been able to love her? Wilbur found himself, even at that moment, wondering how the thing could be done—wondering to just what note the untouched cords would vibrate; just how she should be awakened one morning to find that she—Moran, sea rover, virgin unconquered, without law, without land, without sex—was, after all, a woman.

"Mate!" she exclaimed of a sudden. "The barrels are keeping us up—the empty barrels in the hold. Hoh! We'll make land yet!"

It was true. The empty hogsheads, destined for the storage of oil, had been forced up by the influx of the water to the roof of the hold and were acting as so many buoys. The schooner could sink no lower. An hour later, the quarter deck all awash, her bow thrown high into the air, listing horribly to starboard, the Bertha Milliner took ground on the shore of Magdalena bay at about the turn of the tide.

Moran swung herself over the side, hip deep in the water, and, wading ashore with a line, made fast to the huge skull of a whale half buried in the sand at that point.

Wilbur followed. The schooner had grounded upon the southern horn of the bay and lay easily on a spit of sand. They could not examine the nature of the leak until low water the next morning.

"Well, here we are," said Moran, her thumbs in her belt. "What next? We may be here for two days; we may be here for two years. It all depends upon how bad a hole she has. Have we 'put in for repairs,' or have we been cast away? Can't tell till tomorrow morning. Meanwhile I'm hungry."

They pledged each other.

Half of the stores of the schooner were water soaked, but upon examination Wilbur found that enough remained intact to put them beyond all fear for the present.

"There's plenty of water up the creek," he said, "and we can snare all the quail we want, and then there's the fish and abalone. Even if the stores were gone we could make out very well."

The schooner's cabin was full of water, and Wilbur's hammock was gone, so the pair decided to camp on shore. In that torrid weather to sleep in the open air was a luxury.

In great good spirits the two sat down to their first meal on land. Moran cooked a supper that, barring the absence of coffee, was delicious. The whisky was had from aboard, and they pledged each other, standing up, in something over two stiff fingers.

"Moran," said Wilbur, "you ought to have been born a man."

"At all events, mate," she said—"at all events, I'm not a girl."

"No!" exclaimed Wilbur as he filled his pipe. "No, you're just Moran—Moran of the Lady Letty."

"And I'll stay that, too," she said decisively.

Never had an evening been more beautiful in Wilbur's eyes. There was not a breath of air. The stillness was so profound that the faint murmur of the [illegible] behind the eardrums became an oppression. The ocean tiptoed toward the land with tiny rustling steps. The west was one gigantic stained window, the ocean floor a solid shimmer of opalescence. Behind them sullen purples marked the horizon, hooded with mountain crests, and after a long while the moon shrugged a gleaming shoulder into view.

Wilbur, dressed in Chinese jeans and blouse, with Chinese wicker sandals on his bare feet, sat with his back against the whale's skull, smoking quietly. For a long time there was no conversation. Then at last:

"No," said Moran in a low voice. "This is the life I'm made for. In six years I've not spent three consecutive weeks on land. Now that Ellert"—she always spoke of her father by his first name—"now that Ellert is dead, I've not a tie, not a relative, not even a friend, and I don't wish it."

"But the loneliness of the life, the solitude," said Wilbur—"that's what I don't understand. Did it ever occur to you that the best happiness is the happiness that one shares?"

Moran clasped a knee in both hands and looked out to sea. She never wore a hat, and the red light of the afterglow was turning her rye hued hair to saffron.

"Hoh!" she exclaimed, her heavy voice pitched even lower than usual. "Who could understand or share any of my pleasures or be happy when I'm happy? And, besides, I'm happiest when I'm alone—I don't want any one."

"But," hesitated Wilbur, "one is not always alone. After all, you are a girl, and men, sailor men especially, are beasts when it's a question of a woman—an unprotected woman."

"I'm stronger than most men," said Moran simply. "If you, for instance, had been like some men I should have fought you. It wouldn't have been the first time," she added, smoothing one huge braid between her palms.

Wilbur looked at her with intent curiosity—noted again, as if for the first time, the rough, blue overalls thrust into the shoes; the coarse flannel shirt open at the throat, the belt with its sheath knife, her arms big and white and tattooed in sailor fashion, her thick, muscular neck; her red face, with its pale blue eyes and almost massive jaw, and her hair, her heavy, yellow, fragrant hair, that lay over her shoulder and breast, coiling and looping in her lap.

"No," he said, with a long breath, "I don't make it out. I knew you were out of my experience, but I begin to think now that you are out of even my imagination. You are right, you should keep to yourself. You should be alone—your mate isn't made yet. You are splendid just as you are," while under his breath he added, his teeth clinching, "but I love you!"

It was growing late, the stars were all out, the moon riding high. Moran yawned.

Letters from Women

Cured by the use of Kodol are received daily. Their troubles nearly all begin with indigestion or other stomach disorder.

If the food you eat fails to give strength to your body, it is because the juices secreted by the stomach and digestive organs are inadequate to transform the nutrient properties of the food into blood. That is indigestion. The system is deprived of the amount of nourishment required to keep up the strength, and the result is that one or more of the delicate organs gradually grows weak, and then weaker, until finally it is diseased. Here a great mistake is made. That of treating the diseased organ. The best doctors in the land make this very mistake. Why should they? It is so easy to see that the trouble is not there.

Kodol Cures

This famous remedy puts the stomach and digestive organs in a healthy condition so that rich, red blood is sent coursing through the veins and arteries of every muscle, tissue and fiber throughout every organ of the entire body, and by Nature's law of health, full strength and vigor is soon restored to each.

Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders.

I have taken Kodol for nearly two months after each meal and it is the only remedy that gave relief from the terrible pains I endured. After a time I would take it but once a day, and now, while I keep a bottle handy I seldom need it, as it has cured me. MRS. J. W. COOLBAUGH, Milo Center, N. Y.

UNITED MEDICAL CO., BOX 74, LANCASTER, PA.

Sold in Bellefonte by C. M. Parrish.

For over a third of a century Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has sold largely more than any other Blood Purifier or Stomach tonic
Bigger sales today than ever before. Does that not the true test? Cures others why not you? makes rich blood!

AN IMITATION OF NATURE'S METHOD of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous force is used when you take an alterative extract of herbs and roots, without the use of alcohol, like Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This vegetable medicine coaxes the digestive functions and helps in the assimilation of food, or rather takes from the food just the nutriment the blood requires.

Along with its use one should take exercise in the outdoor air, get all one can of God's sunlight and air; a mild breathing exercise practiced each day. This "Medical Discovery" gives no false stimulation, because it does not contain alcohol or a narcotic. It helps digestion and the assimilation of such elements in the food as are required for the blood. Instead of a cod liver oil, against which the already sensitive stomach will declare open rebellion, this tonic has a pacifying action upon the sensitive stomach and gives to the blood the food elements the tissues require. It maintains one's nutrition by enabling him to eat, retain, digest and assimilate nutritious food. It overcomes gastric irritability and symptoms of indigestion, and, in this way, fever, night-sweats, headaches, etc., are done away with.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies the blood and entirely eradicates the poisons that breed and feed disease. It thus cures scrofula, eczema, erysipelas, boils, pimples, and other eruptions that mar and scar the skin. Pure blood is essential to good health. The weak, run-down, debilated condition which so many people experience is commonly the effect of impure blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery not only cleanses the blood of impurties, but it increases the activity of the blood-making glands, and it enriches the body with an abundant supply of pure, rich blood.

No matter how powerful the intellect or the resources of intellectual power, it must be backed up by physical force. Every day the youth or man must manufacture a pint of rich, arterial blood, that is pure, stimulating to the brain, and that can rebuild the tissues that were destroyed in yesterday's work.

"I have been a sufferer from indigestion for some thirty years, at times," writes Mr. S. W. Mullenax, of Circleville, W. Va., "and have used medicine from several of our best physicians, which gave me only a little temporary relief. They said I could never be cured. Last winter I was stricken with the worst spell that I ever had. I suffered with such severe pains in the pit of my stomach that I could neither work nor sleep, and my weight went down from one hundred and ninety-five pounds to one hundred and sixty pounds in about two months' time. I then concluded that I would try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. By the time the first bottle was gone, I felt some relief from my severe suffering so continued until I had used four bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and two vials of 'Pleasant Pellets.' I am truly thankful for the great benefit which I have received from your medicine, and can cordially recommend it to others."

Our Own State College.

Bellefonte and Centre county feel a just and natural pride in the great advancement and progress of the Pennsylvania State College. It is a part and parcel of old Centre's growth and history and as such is an object of congratulation to our people. The college under the presidency of Dr. George W. Atherton, assisted by his able corp of assistants is steadily growing in usefullness.

It was organized in 1859 and was first known as the "Farmers' High School," which was appropriate from the fact that its original purpose was the dissemination of agricultural knowledge, and for which it offered splendid inducements for the acquirement of that class of education. In 1862 the name was changed to the "Agricultural College of Pennsylvania," and later in 1874, after the enactment of legislation by which it was to receive the income from the proceeds of the national land grant, it was christened the "Pennsylvania State College," by which it is still known.

The institution includes in its courses both scientific and classical studies, military tactics and branches that are related to the agricultural and mechanic arts. It offers a liberal and practical education in the leading branches of mathematics, natural and physical science in order to prepare youth "for the several pursuits and p ofessions of life." while no longer exclusively agricultural it is doing more in the direction of progressive and scientific agriculture than when that was its principal object.

Situated in the geographical center of the state and presenting superior inducements, the Pennsylvania State College is destined to become one of the greatest and most beneficial institutions of learning in the United States.

On last Thursday April 28, she passed the 87th mile stone in life's journey and we are glad to say she is enjoying the best of health and spirits.

She is able to read and does a great deal of fancy sewing. On last Sunday she drove to Axe Mann to see her sister, Mrs. Sarah Williams and together they visited the old Hamilton homestead at Pleasant Gap station where the most of her life was spent and where all her children were born. The day proved a most enjoyoble one and it is hoped she may live long to enjoy many more such happy days.

Jasper W. Stover.

Died of appendicitis on Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock at his home on Penn street, Millheim aged 49 years and 28 days. Mr. Stover about two weeks ago was taken sick with what was thought to be typhoid fever. After a week's sickness his physician, Dr. C. S. Musser, discovered that he was suffering from appendicitis and an abdominal abscess, and an operation was decided upon. On last Thursday afternoon the operation was performed. Dr. Musser had charge of the case and was assisted by Dr. Ball, of Lock Haven, Dr. Glosser, of Williamsport, and Dr. Braucht, of Spring Mills. The operation was performed successfully and he seemed to be on a fair way to recovery when the nurse, who attended him, found on Saturday evening that the wound had mortified and that he had but a short time to live.

He has left to survive a sorrowing widow and two brothers, George B., of Millheim and Philip, of Kansas.

Mr. Stover was born in Haines township and was a son of Philip and Catharine Stover. At an early age he entered the store of his brother-in law, J. W. Snook, of Millheim and after several years spent in clerking he started in the mercantile business for himself at the place his store now occupies and there continued in the business up to the time of his last sickness. He was a prominent citizen of Millheim, always identified with any interests that tended to improve the town and was an upright and conscientious business man. In the death of Mr. Stover the town has lost one of its best citizens.

Funeral services were held last Thursday morning conducted by Rev. I. N. Bair, assisted by Rev. B. R. M. Sheeder, of Aaronsburg, and Rev. G. W. McElnay, of Spring Mills. Interment in Fairview cemetery.

Editor's Advance Sheet.

The Engineering Magazine for May has an important article by Mr. W. L. Clark, general manager of the foreign trade of the General Electric Company, reviewing American and European commercial conditions. He gives a very just est mate of the equipment and characteristics on the two sides, and concludes that the United States will reach the ideal combination of economical production of both special and standard work when forced to it by necessities of trade. At present the American manufacturer is indifferent to meeting the conditions required by foreign buyers, because he finds at home the best market in the world.

Mr. Hess makes a graphical representation of the effect of the various modern methods of wage payment upon the output of the workman and the profits of the employer. Mr. A. W. Thompson describes a cost-keeping system for a repair shop. Mr. Frocklehurst tells what the great technical school at Manchester is doing in the training of engineering apprentices. Two more very handsomely illustrated articles are those by Mr G. H. Baxter, on hydraulic wharf cranes and machinery, and by Mr. G. L. Fowler on the coal mines of the Pocahontas region The number is rounded out by the full Review and Index of the Engineering Press.—The Engineering Magazine, New York.

—A Gallitzen boy named Harry Nagle, aged 15 years, has confessed to throwing switches on the Cresson and Clearfield branch railroad Sunday, April 17, which opened the main track of the branch to a siding. On the following Monday the regular passenger train ran onto the siding and against a car of lime standing on the track. The train was moving slowly else a wreck would surely have occurred. The offense makes him liable to a fine of not more than $10,000 and imprisonment for not more than 10 years.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper.

FATHER ZARAK'S VINDICATION

The Statement of His Attorney A. O. Furst as Presented to Court.

Previous to the habus corpus proceedings Father Zarak refused on the advice of his attorney to make any statement in regard to the death of young Sofka, but Thursday at the hearing he made a full and complete statement of the unfortunate affair. In justice to Father Zarak we publish the statement of his attorney and also the remarks of the District Attorney.

Upon the assembling of the Court the District attorney arose and said: May it please the Court:

I do not see how we can ask that Father Zarak be indicted. I understand that the boy's mother had given instructions to Father Zarak. the boy's father being dead, to look after the dead boy. Dr. Seibert and Dr. Hayes, two physicians of this borough, who assisted in holding the post mortem, both agree that they fail to find any marks of violence on his person, although there was some discoloration of the skin which they say was caused by reason of inflammation and after the death. They found no marks of violence anywhere on his body. As far as I am personally concerned and from the investigation that I have made or have been able to make, I am perfectly willing to have this defendant discharged, because I do not see how he can be indicted under this proceeding and under the testimony that will be given by the physicians who held the autopsy and the coroner himself. The coroner is here and has the inquest, and I do not deem it necessary to take any testimony. I am perfectly satisfied to do so, but so far as I am concerned I do not see that it is necessary. I do not see that there is anything here that would warrant us in asking that this defendant be bound over for his appearance at the next term of court.

At the conclusion of the statement by the District Attorney, Judge Furst, attorney for Father Victor Zarak, said to the Court:

May it please your honor:—

I would very much like to have the coroner's inquest filed of record in this case and in justice to Father Zarak desire to say that as his counsel during the pendency of this unfortunate proceeding and his confinement in jail, he has considered it wise to say nothing and make no statement of the circumstances, fortunate or unfortunate, which have led to this case. I now desire to make a statement to the court, because the discharge of the defendant by the court is simply a ministerial act and unless the proper facts are presented somewhere they will remain unknown to the world.

Father Zarak is the Polish priest at Clarence, this county. According to the custom of this church, the parents of children may request the priest, under certain circumstances, to administer discipline to those children who are incorrigible. This young man, Andrew Sofka, was a member of the Catholic church, but he had become remiss in the performance of his duties. His mother, who is a christian woman, asked Father Zarak to chastise her child. Father Zarak missed him at Sabbath school, he missed him at church, he missed him at other places where the services of the church required his attendance, and the mother sent this young boy to the Father's house, and on the evening of the 18th of April the boy came there for the purpose of receiving punishment for his neglect of duty; and the Father, pursuing the custom of the church, did, with a switch which we have here in court, strike this boy over the legs and on his seat six or seven times, but not severely, not so as to make a mark. He had all his clothes on two shirts, coat, vest, and heavy winter trousers and underclothing. The boy after this apologized to the Father and went home. The next day, or along about that time, he engaged in playing ball, and on Friday he went into the mines and played ball also at various times between that and Sunday morning. On Sunday he appeared to be sick. Dr. Neff had been called in to see him on the Friday before, I think, and saw that he had a severe attack of measles. The doctor intimated to the family that he would like to see him on the following Saturday. The family said if they required his attendance they would let him know and he did not come back.

We have here the witnesses who were present when the alleged dying declaration was made. The commitment would indicate that the boy was clubbed and kicked, but the witnesses who were present when he made the statement say that the boy did not say that he was either clubbed or kicked. When the autopsy was fixed to be held by the coroner I went to the District Attorney, and I wish to say this in recognition of his fairness in this matter, and said to him that I would like to have a Bellefonte physician present. He said that was right and proper and he gave me a letter to the coroner, which Dr. Hayes took with him, requesting in the interest of justice that these Bellefonte physicians should be present at the autopsy to be held on Monday night, the boy having died on Sunday. Father Zarak was immediately arrested through the instigation of whom it is not necessary to say, and brought here to jail, almost in his night clothes, without opportunity to put on his clothing and without sufficient time to provide for his comfort either in jail or on his way there. The autopsy was held and I think there were five physicians present—the coroner, Dr. Huff; Dr. Young; Dr. Hayes; Dr Neff and Dr. Seibert. Dr. Seibert and Hayes made the autopsy, first looking for wounds or bruises upon his person and finding none, but there were two or three places where leeches had been placed upon him and there were some signs of discoloration, and, as we all know, discoloration in cases of that kind increases largely after death owing to extravasation of the blood. They then proceeded to the autopsy. The body was opened and it was discovered that the organs were in sound condition, his lungs and his heart were in normal condition, no congestion or anything of that sort; but in going down into the abdomen Dr. Hayes told me—I have not had an opportunity of talking with Dr. Seibert—that the farther down they went the more serious became the inflammation, showing that the cause of death was not from outward influences but from internal causes, and this inflammation continued until they reached the appendix. The appendix was rotted off and the contents of the bowels were oozing out through the perforations.

This should have been brought to the knowledge of the court, and Father Zarak, the defendant, should have been liberated at one; but this writ was pending, and while the District Attorney said to me Wednesday that he was willing to have the defendant admitted to bail until this hearing, I said I thought it would be proper now, inasmuch as we were within twenty-four hours of the time fixed for the hearing, to wait until the hearing took place.

While we regret exceedingly this boy's death, under the facts of this case it cannot in any way be attributed to Father Zarak. Death came upon him suddenly and as the result of causes for which no man can be held responsible. I make this statement in the interest of justice and for the vindication of Father Zarak.

I wish further in this connection to offer in evidence and read to the court coroner's inquest which I hold in my hand. It is as follows:—

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania } ss:
County of Centre }

An inquisition taken at Clarence, Pa., in the County of Centre aforesaid on this 25th day of April, A. D. 1904, before S. M. Huff, Esq., coroner of the county aforesaid, upon view of the body of Andrew Sofka then and there lying dead upon the solemn oaths or affirmation respectively of A. B. Buddinger, John Morris, J. A. Confer, Alfred Lucas, Geo. Kachik and Eugene Krone, six good and lawful men of the county aforesaid charged to inquire on the part of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania when, where and by what means the said Andrew Sofka came to his death; who, upon their respective oaths or affirmation, do say that it appears from the viewing of the body and from the evidence produced before them that the said Andrew Sofka came to his death on the 24th day of April A. D. 1904, at Clarence, by peritonitis superinduced by appendicitis, whether brought on by whipping administered by Father Zarak we are unable to say.

Jurors: Geo. Kachik, A. B. Buddinger, Alfred Lucas, John A. Confer, John Morris, Eugene Krone. S. M. Huff, Coroner.

Now, may it please the court, under these facts I ask that Father Zarak be discharged from the commitment.

WASHINGTON LETTER

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., May, 3, 1904.

The second session of the 58th American Congress adjourned on Thursday, "without day" with all the simplicity good feeling, dignity and business methods characteristic of the American people and the times in which they live. As Speaker Cannon said in his closing remarks, the "heat of the contest has died away," and both sides of the House part with mutual respect for each other. While he co-operated with the majority, he recognized that the minority had a function to perform hardly second in its importance, and so he said it ever will be while the Republican endures.

From half past ten o'clock Thursday morning until nearly two o'clock p. m. business in the House proceeded smoothly and rapidly and many bills were passed, mostly of minor importance. It was hard work to keep members in their seats, and they crowded the forum in front of the Speaker's desk like bees in swarming time. Mr. Van Duzer of Nevada made his usual rainbow speech about that state which he claims is the most important in the Union. This set the House in good humor, and roars of laughter followed.

The only other incident of interest occurred when Mr. Lacey, of Iowa, attempted to have a bill passed reinstating the cadets at the naval academy at Annapolis, Md., who have been discharged by the commandant, Capt. Brown, for disobeying orders and hazing. A hot fire of protest came from both sides of the House. Hon. Champ Clark, Mo., exploded in a white heat of indignation, and figuratively speaking, spread himself all over the surrounding benches. There were some who pleaded for mercy for the boys, on the ground that the punishment was out of proportion to the offence. Others pointed out that a law passed by Congress should be upheld, and that if the cadets were restored to the Academy, there would be no further use in trying to suppress hazing. Finally the debate was clinched by a Congressman who announced that if the offenders were reinstated he would offer an amendment to the bill permitting the hazers who were dismissed from West Point to be returned also. So the bill was lost, and the Annapolis cadets of the higher class who maltreated the young and tender cadets of the lowest class, will be forced to return to the walks of civil life.

As the moment for the adjournment of Congress drew near, the suppressed excitement was intense. Every member was in his seat, and an unusual silence followed. At 2 o'clock Mr. John Sharp Williams, leader of the minority, offered his resolution of thanks to the Speaker for the impartial manner in which he had presided during the session, and for "the sturdy common sense and genial good humor" which he had displayed, Mr, Jas. D. Richardson, Dem., of Tenn., had taken the chair, and Speaker Cannon had modestly slipped out of the chamber. The Williams resolution was adopted by a rising vote, every member springing to his feet. A committee was appointed to hunt up the Speaker, and "fetch him in." He was found out in Statuary Hall gazing at the figure of the first speaker of the first American Congress, Muhlenberg, of Pa. As he came into the chamber, leaning on the arm of Mr. Williams, there was lusty cheering and wild waving of handerkerchiefs. The Speaker was visibly affected, and had to struggle to control his emotions. With his brief return of thanks, and the fall of the gavel at exactly twenty minutes past two o'clock, the session passed into history, and the Representatives began to sing "America," followed by the "Doxology." The Speaker descended the steps of his desk, and shook hands with each member as he filed past into the cloak rooms.

The proceedings in the Senate, the last day of Congress, were not so lively or interesting as in the House. The President came to the capitol early in the forenoon, with his wife and family. While he was busy signing bills in the Executive room, Mrs. Roosevelt occupied a seat in the Senate gallery, and had the pleasure of listening to speeches by Gorman of Md., and Aldrich of R. I., against and in favor of the Administration. It is evident that there has been an attempt on the part of many Democrats, to impress the people with the notion that the President is an unsafe man, and has too much influence with the party controlling Congress. Mr. Aldrich denied that Congress had been unduly influenced by anybody, and asserted that it adjourned because it had finished all the business in hand. Mrs. Roosevelt appeared to be both amused and interested in the debate. Mr. Gorman presented the usual resolution of thanks to President Frye of the Senate, and at 2 o'clock he declared the adjournment.

Senator Smoot is naturally gratified that he was not unseated at the demand of the good orthodox people. He will remain a Senator for the present. Senator McComas of Maryland, and Judge O. W. Powers, of Utah, made the discovery that the Mormon church is a trust. It owns and controls great commercial institutions, as well as the matrimonial market within its jurisdiction. There are good and bad trusts, and it may be the Mormon church cannot be trusted. Senator Hopkins says that the Methodist church to which he belongs in Chicago owns a great deal of real estate and rents buildings. Trinity church in New York is one of the largest real estate trusts in America.

There is some disagreement among Congressmen as to the exact amount of money appropriated during the last session to carry on the Government. That it will approximate $809,000,000 is admitted. But this is a very large country with a never satisfied people. The largest appropriation bill passed was for the Post Office, carrying $172,574,998. The Naval appropriation amounted to $98,005,140. And the money to be paid out in connection with the Panama canal amounted to $50,000,000.

BEAUTIFUL RESOLUTIONS.

At a meeting of the Firemen's Association of the State of Pennsylvania, held at Allentown Pa., October 6th and 7th 1903, the following resolutions were unanamously adopted.

WHEREAS; It has pleased Almighty God to remove from this sphere our esteemed Friend and Statesman, General Daniel H. Hastings. For many years previous to his election as chief executive of this state, the firemen of Pennsylvania through their Association had endeavored to have some legislation passed which could benefit the entire fire service of the State. It is admitted that firemen are brave, even to rashness and it was thought that when bravery brought death or disaster that the State or community where the disaster occurred should testify its appreciation of such an art, and in some substantial way. Governor Daniel H. Hastings when in the executive chair, signed a bill June 25, 1895, providing a fund for the relief of firemen who might become disabled or worn out in the performance of their duties, and for the families of firemen killed in active service. The signing of this "Bill" was a red letter day in our history, and it has endeared his "Memory" to every fireman in the State.

Resolved, That in the death of General Hastings the firemen of Pennsylvania have lost a friend who was devoted to their interest, and whose sympathetic heart guided the hand and pen which has done so much for the indigent and disabled firemen of Pennsylvania and for the windows and orphans of the brave heroes who have given their lives in the performance of their duties in endeavoring to save life and property.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the records of the Association and a copy be engraved and presented to the family of the deceased.

Attest
W. W. WUNDER, Sec.,
Charles E, SPEARS, Pres.

A copy of the resolutions were beautifully engraved upon fine linen paper, and handsomely framed in black ebony. The lettering was done by a renowned artist by the name of Kostenbader, and on Tuesday evening the Firemen's Relief Association with the Presidents and chiefs of the Logan and Undine Steam Fire Engine Companies presented the resolutions to Mrs. Hastings at her home on Allegheny street. Edward Blanchard Esq., made the presentation speech in behalf of the Association. Col. Wilbur F. Reeder, made the speech of acceptance in behalf of Mrs. Hastings.

The officers of the local branch of the Relief Association are A. G. Archey, president, Joseph Wise, secretary and treasurer; Chief of the Logan's, John J. Bower; Chief of the Undines, Jacob Knisely,

THE WORLD'S FAIR CONTEST.

Opportunity to See and Enjoy the Big St Louis Fair

The winner in the Bellefonte Republican and Daily News contest who will go to see the St Louis World's Fair will have an opportunity to see one of the greatest shows of modern times.

It comprises all Europe's art, all America's industry, and produces and marvels from every land and clime under the sun.

More money has been expended for this purpose than for any exposition ever before held.

A Pretty Wedding.

The Chester Evening Times, of April 21st, publishes the following notice of the wedding of Bernice E. Frysinger, who was a daughter of the late Elizabeth Faxon and a grand-daughter of Myron and Martha E. Faxon, formerly residents of Bellefonte and Milesburg.

Miss Bernice E. Frysinger, daughter of Ed. J. Frysinger, the well known journalists, and J. Leonard Lewis, of Philadelphia, were married Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, at 712 Madison street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Francis M. Taitt, rector of St. Paul's P. E. church in the presence of only the relatives of both bride and groom. The couple were unattended.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of white, becoming in the extreme. Immediately after the marriage a reception and dinner followed and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis left on a wedding trip to the national capital and other southern points. They will reside in Philadelphia on their return, where Mr. Lewis is connected in business with a large iron concern.

The young wife is a talented musician, having a large clientele in Chester as pupils. The couple have many friends who extend their sincerest wish for a happy married life.

FATHER ZAREK FREE.

The Habeus Corpus Proceedings Resulted in a Complete Vindication.

The habeus corpus proceeding in the case of Father Zarek, the priest from Clarence, who it was alleged had caused the death of young Andrew Sofka, through a whipping he had given him, took place at 1 o'clock Thursday before Judge Love and resulted in a complete vidication for the imprisoned Priest. The Court room was crowded with interested spectators.

District Attorney N. B. Spangler represented the Commonwealth while Ex-Judge A. O. Furst sat beside his client, Father Zarek.

Coroner Huff was present and had with him a jar containing Sofka's stomach Doctors Hayes, Seibert and Neff who assisted at the autopsy were also present as were the members of the Coroner's jury.

Judge Furst at once moved for the discharge of the prisoner in view of the report rendered by the autopsy to the effect that the boys death was due to peritonitis superinduced by appendicitis.

District Attorney Spangler arose and stated that in view of all the facts in the case as presented he was unable to substantiate the charge against Father Zarek and therefore added his request to that of Judge Furst for the prisoners discharge.

Judge Love asked that the verdict of the Coroner's Jury be read. It confirmed that of the autopsy and was signed by the six members of the jury as follows: Geo. Kachik, Eugene Krone, A. B. Buddinger, John Morris, Alfred Lucas and J. A. Confer.

Judge Furst then made a statement to the Court in behalf of Father Zarek in which the circumstances of the case were carefully gone over. He showed clearly that the boys death was not due to any act of Father Zarek and clearly exonerated him from all blame. In tomorrow's issue we will publish the statement in full if possible to get it.

Judge Love then said "inview of the facts which have been presented here and which are not controverted on the part of the Commonwealth and which the Commonwealth accepts as being a correct statement of the facts which resulted in the death of Andrew Sofka, and no evidence being offered to controvert that which has been established by the return of the Coroner's inquest and the other circumstances which have been detailed, and no further evidence being produced on the part of the Commonwealth we deem it our duty to discharge the prisoner and let him go free from this charge and from further confinement.

This ended the proceedings and Father Zarek was a free man. Hundreds of people pressed forward to congratulate him and everyone seemed to feel that the decision of the Judge was a just one.

A Presentation Speech.

William Frank was presented with a gold watch on Saturday by the members of No 1 turn at the Bellefonte Furnace. He is about to leave for Hollidaysburg to become Superintendent there of the electric light plant. The presentation speech was made by Daniel O'Leary and at the request of the men we publish it. It was as follows:

FRIEND AND FELLOW-WORKMAN:

In behalf of No 1 turn of the Bellefonte Furnace Company I express their sorrow and regret, for the retiring of their foreman, William Frank whom they highly esteem.

Your many good qualities as a boss and as a citizen and for the impartiality, clemency and fairness in your dealings with the men during your term of foremanship, I say again, we are sorry for your leaving and when I say that, I am voicing the sentiments of your turn. But as you are leaving of your own accord and satisfied its to your interest, then we wish you luck and success, and may your record in the future be as bright and as spotless as your record in the past. When the time comes when you are called upon to render an account of your stewardship, the salutation will be these words "well done good and faithful servant." If you ever return to Bellefonte you will be welcome to our homes and to our hearts, and now in behalf of your friends I present you with this token of affection and esteem, I hope you will accept it, as it is given with good hearts, by those who prize your many sterling qualities. As the years roll bye and the evening of your life draws near, and while setting in the home of your cloudless old age you will look on this token of remembrance and your mind will float back the stream of years to the Bellefonte Furnace and rest a few minutes on this meeting of your friends and you will ask yourself what has become of them. You will say some are dead, and if any of them are Furnacing they will not be too green to burn when they die.

We bid you good-bye; we bid you adieu; may your life's path be garland with laurel and rue.

—Pawnee Bill's advertising car No. 2 was here Tuesday night and now the bare walls and windows are all a glare with show bills announcing the approach of this great attraction. Some of Walter L. Main's people are also here billing for their show which appears May 21. This together with Hi Henry's minstrels bills gives the staid old town a gala appearance.

COUNCIL MEETING.

Regular Semi-Monthly Session of the Borough Council.

The regular semi-monthly session of the borough council was held on Monday evening commencing at 7:30 o'clock with President Jenkins in the chair and the following members present: Kirk, Fenlon, Seibert, Keichline, Keller, Derstine and Wise.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read by the clerk, Mr. Kelley, and there being no corrections they stood approved.

There were no verbal communications from citizens but a written one from Miss Ida Green, of South Water street in regard to the condition of Water street near the residence of F. Peebles Green. She asked that the street be put in better condition.

Chairman Derstine of the Street committee reported that they were cleaning up the streets in various parts of town.

Chairman Kirk of the Finance committee handed in a partial report of the boro treasurer, Mr. Meek. He had a report from Solicitor Fortney recommending that S. D Ray's offer in regard to taxes be accepted.

The agreement between the Pennsylvania railroad and the boro in regard to laying a sewer pipe across their premises from South Thomas street to the race was read by the clerk. This sewer is to extend along Thomas street from High to intersection of Lamb street. They had to cross the railroad company's property to reach the creek and it was necessary to get the right-of-way. After some discussion Mr. Seibert moved that the agreement submitted by the Pennsylvania railroad company be accepted and that the President be empowered to execute the agreement. Mr. Fenlon seconded the motion and it was carried. The Pennsylvania Railroad Co., will contribute $200 towards the building of the sewer and citizens of the West Ward $200 more, the balance to be paid by the boro.

A list of delinquent water taxes for 1902 was turned in by J. K. Johnston some time ago as uncollectable. Mr. Fenlon made a motion that these accounts be turned over to boro Solicitor Fortney for collection. Seconded by Mr. Keller and carried.

The Finance committee recommended that Collector S. D. Ray's offer of settlement of taxes be accepted was approved by council.

Chairman Fenlon reported having seen Col. Reynolds in regard to extending the period of trial of the Phoenix Pumping Station. Col. Reynolds seemed to think that he had given enough time for a fair trial and would not agree to extend the time. He offered to turn over all the mill property including the building for whatever use they desired provided they would exonerate him from the taxes on same amounting to $300. The boro to keep it insured also. He said if the property was damaged by fire he would charge no rental until the damages were repaired.

Dr. Kirk objected strongly to drawing up the lease and accepting the plant until they had a further test. He claimed the town had not had a fair trial of the pump and went on record to that effect. Mr. Fenlon, Mr. Keller and others were in favor of accepting the property after proper articles and agreements were drawn up and signed.

Mr. Fenlon moved that the Finance committee be empowered to consult with Col. Reynolds and make a satisfactory arrangement and report at next meeting. All necessary papers etc., to be drawn up. Motion was carried

There is a party desires to purchase the old Undine building on Logan St. It was referred to Fire and Police committes for investigation and report at next meeting.

The complaint of Miss Green in regard to South Water street was referred to Water committee who promised to place it in better condition. It was torn up by the Water committee when they laid the water pipes to Phoenix mill.

Several tar crossings in the boro need repair and the Street committee was authorized to make them.

WASHINGTON LETTER

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., May, 3, 1904.

The second session of the 58th American Congress adjourned on Thursday, "without day" with all the simplicity good feeling, dignity and business methods characteristic of the American people and the times in which they live. As Speaker Cannon said in his closing remarks, the "heat of the contest has died away," and both sides of the House part with mutual respect for each other. While he co-operated with the majority, he recognized that the minority had a function to perform hardly second in its importance, and so he said it ever will be while the Republican endures.

From half past ten o'clock Thursday morning until nearly two o'clock p. m. business in the House proceeded smoothly and rapidly and many bills were passed, mostly of minor importance. It was hard work to keep members in their seats, and they crowded the forum in front of the Speaker's desk like bees in swarming time. Mr. Van Duzer of Nevada made his usual rainbow speech about that state which he claims is the most important in the Union. This set the House in good humor, and roars of laughter followed.

The only other incident of interest occurred when Mr. Lacey, of Iowa, attempted to have a bill passed reinstating the cadets at the naval academy at Annapolis, Md., who have been discharged by the commandant, Capt. Brown, for disobeying orders and hazing. A hot fire of protest came from both sides of the House. Hon. Champ Clark, Mo., exploded in a white heat of indignation, and figuratively speaking, spread himself all over the surrounding benches. There were some who pleaded for mercy for the boys, on the ground that the punishment was out of proportion to the offence. Others pointed out that a law passed by Congress should be upheld, and that if the cadets were restored to the Academy, there would be no further use in trying to suppress hazing. Finally the debate was clinched by a Congressman who announced that if the offenders were reinstated he would offer an amendment to the bill permitting the hazers who were dismissed from West Point to be returned also. So the bill was lost, and the Annapolis cadets of the higher class who maltreated the young and tender cadets of the lowest class, will be forced to return to the walks of civil life.

As the moment for the adjournment of Congress drew near, the suppressed excitement was intense. Every member was in his seat, and an unusual silence followed. At 2 o'clock Mr. John Sharp Williams, leader of the minority, offered his resolution of thanks to the Speaker for the impartial manner in which he had presided during the session, and for "the sturdy common sense and genial good humor" which he had displayed, Mr, Jas. D. Richardson, Dem., of Tenn., had taken the chair, and Speaker Cannon had modestly slipped out of the chamber. The Williams resolution was adopted by a rising vote, every member springing to his feet. A committee was appointed to hunt up the Speaker, and "fetch him in." He was found out in Statuary Hall gazing at the figure of the first speaker of the first American Congress, Muhlenberg, of Pa. As he came into the chamber, leaning on the arm of Mr. Williams, there was lusty cheering and wild waving of handerkerchiefs. The Speaker was visibly affected, and had to struggle to control his emotions. With his brief return of thanks, and the fall of the gavel at exactly twenty minutes past two o'clock, the session passed into history, and the Representatives began to sing "America," followed by the "Doxology." The Speaker descended the steps of his desk, and shook hands with each member as he filed past into the cloak rooms.

The proceedings in the Senate, the last day of Congress, were not so lively or interesting as in the House. The President came to the capitol early in the forenoon, with his wife and family. While he was busy signing bills in the Executive room, Mrs. Roosevelt occupied a seat in the Senate gallery, and had the pleasure of listening to speeches by Gorman of Md., and Aldrich of R. I., against and in favor of the Administration. It is evident that there has been an attempt on the part of many Democrats, to impress the people with the notion that the President is an unsafe man, and has too much influence with the party controlling Congress. Mr. Aldrich denied that Congress had been unduly influenced by anybody, and asserted that it adjourned because it had finished all the business in hand. Mr. Roosevelt appeared to be both amused and interested in the debate. Mr. Gorman presented the usual resolution of thanks to President Frye of the Senate, and at 2 o'clock he declared the adjournment.

Senator Smoot is naturally gratified that he was not unseated at the demand of the good orthodox people. He will remain a Senator for the present. Senator McComas of Maryland, and Judge O. W. Powers, of Utah, made the discovery that the Mormon church is a trust. It owns and controls great commercial institutions, as well as the matrimonial market within its jurisdiction. There are good and bad trusts, and it may be the Mormon church cannot be trusted. Senator Hopkins says that the Methodist church to which he belongs in Chicago owns a great deal of real estate and rents buildings. Trinity church in New York is one of the largest real estate trusts in America.

There is some disagreement among Congressmen as to the exact amount of money appropriated during the last session to carry on the Government. That it will approximate $800,000,000 is admitted. But this is a very large country with a never satisfied people. The largest appropriation bill passed was for the Post Office, carrying $172,574,998. The Naval appropriation amounted to $98,005,140. And the money to be paid out in connection with the Panama canal amounted to $50,000,000.

BEAUTIFUL RESOLUTIONS.

At a meeting of the Firemen's Association of the State of Pennsylvania, held at Allentown Pa., October 6th and 7th 1903, the following resolutions were unanamously adopted.

WHEREAS; It has pleased Almighty God to remove from this sphere our esteemed Friend and Statesman, General Daniel H. Hastings. For many years previous to his election as chief executive of this state, the firemen of Pennsylvania through their Association had endeavored to have some legislation passed which could benefit the entire fire service of the State. It is admitted that firemen are brave, even to rashness and it was thought that when bravery brought death or disaster that the State or community where the disaster occurred should testify its appreciation of such an art, and in some substantial way. Governor Daniel H. Hastings when in the executive chair, signed a bill June 25, 1895, providing a fund for the relief of firemen who might become disabled or worn out in the performance of their duties, and for the families of firemen killed in active service. The signing of this "Bill" was a red letter day in our history, and it has endeared his "Memory" to every fireman in the State.

Resolved, That in the death of General Hastings the firemen of Pennsylvania have lost a friend who was devoted to their interest, and whose sympathetic heart guided the hand and pen which has done so much for the indigent and disabled firemen of Pennsylvania and for the windows and orphans of the brave heroes who have given their lives in the performance of their duties in endeavoring to save life and property.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the records of the Association and a copy be engraved and presented to the family of the deceased.

Attest
W. W. WUNDER, Sec.,
Charles E, SPEARS, Pres.

A copy of the resolutions were beautifully engraved upon fine linen paper, and handsomely framed in black ebony. The lettering was done by a renowned artist by the name of Kostenbader, and on Tuesday evening the Firemen's Relief Association with the Presidents and chiefs of the Logan and Undine Steam Fire Engine Companies presented the resolutions to Mrs. Hastings at her home on Allegheny street. Edward Blanchard Esq., made the presentation speech in behalf of the Association. Col. Wilbur F. Reeder, made the speech of acceptance in behalf of Mrs. Hastings.

The officers of the local branch of the Relief Association are A. G. Archey, president, Joseph Wise, secretary and treasurer; Chief of the Logan's, John J. Bower; Chief of the Undines, Jacob Knisely.

THE WORLD'S FAIR CONTEST.

Opportunity to See and Enjoy the Big St Louis Fair

The winner in the Bellefonte Republican and Daily News contest who will go to see the St Louis World's Fair will have an opportunity to see one of the greatest shows of modern times.

There has been nothing like it in the past; it is unlikely its equal will be seen again in this century.

It comprises all Europe's art, all America's industry, and products and marvels from every land and clime under the sun.

More money has been expended for this purpose than for any exposition ever before held.

These unique features of the great exposition are worthy the high esteem and attention the candidates and their friends are giving them.

The changes in the vote and the relative standing of the candidates witness to the interest which the public is taking in the outcome of the balloting.

The contest will go to the end in entire impartiality to all.

A Pretty Wedding.

The Chester Evening Times, of April 21st, publishes the following notice of the wedding of Bernice E. Frysinger, who was a daughter of the late Elizabeth Faxon and a grand-daughter of Myron and Martha E. Faxon, formerly residents of Bellefonte and Milesburg.

Miss Bernice E. Frysinger, daughter of Ed. J. Frysinger, the well known journalists, and J. Leonard Lewis, of Philadelphia, were married Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, at 712 Madison street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Francis M. Taitt, rector of St. Paul's P. E. church in the presence of only the relatives of both bride and groom. The couple were unattended.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of white, becoming in the extreme. Immediately after the marriage a reception and dinner followed and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis left on a wedding trip to the national capital and other southern points. They will reside in Philadelphia on their return, where Mr. Lewis is connected in business with a large iron concern.

The young wife is a talented musician, having a large clientele in Chester as pupils. The couple have many friends who extend their sincerest wish for a happy married life.

FATHER ZAREK FREE.

The Habeus Corpus Proceedings Resulted in a Complete Vindication.

The habeus corpus proceeding in the case of Father Zarek, the priest from Clarence, who it was alleged had caused the death of young Andrew Sofka, through a whipping he had given him, took place at 1 o'clock Thursday before Judge Love and resulted in a complete vidication for the imprisoned Priest. The Court room was crowded with interested spectators.

District Attorney N. B. Spangler represented the Commonwealth while Ex-Judge A. O. Furst sat beside his client, Father Zarek.

Coroner Huff was present and had with him a jar containing Sofka's stomach Doctors Hayes, Seibert and Neff who assisted at the autopsy were also present as were the members of the Coroner's jury.

Judge Furst at once moved for the discharge of the prisoner in view of the report rendered by the autopsy to the effect that the boys death was due to peritonitis superinduced by appendicitis.

District Attorney Spangler arose and stated that in view of all the facts in the case as presented he was unable to substantiate the charge against Father Zarek and therefore added his request to that of Judge Furst for the prisoners discharge.

Judge Love asked that the verdict of the Coroner's Jury be read. It confirmed that of the autopsy and was signed by the six members of the jury as follows: Geo. Kachik, Eugene Krone, A. B. Buddinger, John Morris, Alfred Lucas and J. A. Confer.

Judge Furst then made a statement to the Court in behalf of Father Zarek in which the circumstances of the case were carefully gone over. He showed clearly that the boys death was not due to any act of Father Zarek and clearly exonerated him from all blame. In tomorrow's issue we will publish the statement in full if possible to get it.

Judge Love then said "inview of the facts which have been presented here and which are not controverted on the part of the Commonwealth and which the Commonwealth accepts as being a correct statement of the facts which resulted in the death of Andrew Sofka, and no evidence being offered to controvert that which has been established by the return of the Coroner's inquest and the other circumstances which have been detailed, and no further evidence being produced on the part of the Commonwealth we deem it our duty to discharge the prisoner and let him go free from this charge and from further confinement.

This ended the proceedings and Father Zarek was a free man. Hundreds of people pressed forward to congratulate him and everyone seemed to feel that the decision of the Judge was a just one.

A Presentation Speech.

William Frank was presented with a gold watch on Saturday by the members of No 1 turn at the Bellefonte Furnace. He is about to leave for Hollidaysburg to become Superintendent there of the electric light plant. The presentation speech was made by Daniel O'Leary and at the request of the men we publish it. It was as follows:

FRIEND AND FELLOW-WORKMAN:

In behalf of No 1 turn of the Bellefonte Furnace Company I express their sorrow and regret, for the retiring of their foreman, William Frank whom they highly esteem.

Your many good qualities as a boss and as a citizen and for the impartiality, clemency and fairness in your dealings with the men during your term of foremanship, I say again, we are sorry for your leaving and when I say that, I am voicing the sentiments of your turn. But as you are leaving of your own accord and satisfied its to your interest, then we wish you luck and success, and may your record in the future be as bright and as spotless as your record in the past. When the time comes when you are called upon to render an account of your stewardship, the salutation will be these words "well done good and faithful servant." If you ever return to Bellefonte you will be welcome to our homes and to our hearts, and now in behalf of your friends I present you with this token of affection and esteem, I hope you will accept it, as it is given with good hearts, by those who prize your many sterling qualities. As the years roll bye and the evening of your life draws near, and while setting in the home of your cloudless old age you will look on this token of remembrance and your mind will float back the stream of years to the Bellefonte Furnace and rest a few minutes on this meeting of your friends and you will ask yourself what has become of them. You will say some are dead, and if any of them are Furnacing they will not be too green to burn when they die.

We bid you good-bye; we bid you adieu; may your life's path be garland with laurel and rue.

—Pawnee Bill's advertising car No. 2 was here Tuesday night and now the bare walls and windows are all a glare with show bills announcing the approach of this great attraction. Some of Walter L. Main's people are also here billing for their show which appears May 21. This together with Hi Henry's minstrels bills gives the staid old town a gala appearance.

COUNCIL MEETING.

Regular Semi-Monthly Session of the Borough Council.

The regular semi-monthly session of the borough council was held on Monday evening commencing at 7:30 o'clock with President Jenkins in the chair and the following members present: Kirk, Fenlon, Seibert, Keichline, Keller, Derstine and Wise.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read by the clerk, Mr. Kelley, and there being no corrections they stood approved.

There were no verbal communications from citizens but a written one from Miss Ida Green, of South Water street in regard to the condition of Water street near the residence of F. Peebles Green. She asked that the street be put in better condition

Chairman Derstine of the Street committee reported that they were cleaning up the streets in various parts of town.

Chairman Kirk of the Finance committee handed in a partial report of the boro treasurer, Mr. Meek. He had a report from Solicitor Fortney recommending that S. D Ray's offer in regard to taxes be accepted.

The agreement between the Pennsylvania railroad and the boro in regard to laying a sewer pipe across their premises from South Thomas street to the race was read by the clerk. This sewer is to extend along Thomas street from High to intersection of Lamb street. They had to cross the railroad company's property to reach the creek and it was necessary to get the right-of-way. After some discussion Mr. Seibert moved that the agreement submitted by the Pennsylvania railroad company be accepted and that the President be empowered to execute the agreement. Mr. Fenlon seconded the motion and it was carried. The Pennsylvania Railroad Co., will contribute $200 towards the building of the sewer and citizens of the West Ward $200 more, the balance to be paid by the boro.

A list of delinquent water taxes for 1902 was turned in by J. K. Johnston some time ago as uncollectable. Mr. Fenlon made a motion that these accounts be turned over to boro Solicitor Fortney for collection. Seconded by Mr. Keller and carried.

The Finance committee recommended that Collector S. D. Ray's offer of settlement of taxes be accepted was approved by council.

Chairman Fenlon reported having seen Col. Reynolds in regard to extending the period of trial of the Phoenix Pumping Station. Col. Reynolds seemed to think that he had given enough time for a fair trial and would not agree to extend the time. He offered to turn over all the mill property including the building for whatever use they desired provided they would exonerate him from the taxes on same amounting to $300. The boro to keep it insured also. He said if the property was damaged by fire he would charge no rental until the damages were repaired.

Dr. Kirk objected strongly to drawing up the lease and accepting the plant until they had a further test. He claimed the town had not had a fair trial of the pump and went on record to that effect. Mr. Fenlon, Mr. Keller and others were in favor of accepting the property after proper articles and agreements were drawn up and signed.

Mr. Fenlon moved that the Finance committee be empowered to consult with Col. Reynolds and make a satisfactory arrangement and report at next meeting. All necessary papers etc., to be drawn up. Motion was carried

There is a party desires to purchase the old Undine building on Logan St. It was referred to Fire and Police committes for investigation and report at next meeting.

The complaint of Miss Green in regard to South Water street was referred to Water committee who promised to place it in better condition. It was torn up by the Water committee when they laid the water pipes to Phoenix mill.

Several tar crossings in the boro need repair and the Street committee was authorized to make them.

The following bills were approved and orders drawn:

Bfte Electric Co.	241 85
Police Pay Roll	81 50

At last the friends of Mr. Paul Fortney are coming to his aid, although they have long delayed manifesting any interest in the teachers contest, yet they realize that it is not too late yet to make a start, and they are really making a handsome showing for this week we refer you to the count printed in this issue for proof. Astonishing isn't it? Now doubtless few people realized the truth of the statements made in the Republican from time to time about their still being a chance for some "dark horse" to win; but this new turn of affairs will probably bring those prophecies home to these people very forcibly. A great boom, this! May be you don't realize how much this sudden energy on the part of Mr. Fortney's backers will effect the chances that the other contestants have of winning. In the short time given us we have been able to interview several of the world's men of affairs and we quote below the comments of a number of them. A few could not be seen (Senator Chauncy M. Depew was too busy preparing his speech for the National Convention and Mr. Joseph Shope's spare moments were all occupied with—well, you understand who?) and some refused to discuss it at all (Gov. Pennypacker because Matt Quay was not at home and Ed Houser didn't care to say anything until he had seen Pete.) Here are the opinions of a few of the most prominent men (many are omitted on account of lack of space:)—

"The so-called 'Hearst Boom' is of minor importance when compared to this. I advise Mr, Fortney to institute legal proceedings against the Moshannon Coal Co or Bellefonte Central R. R. Co. Pretend to be at war with these great monopolies and you will gain great favor with the masses."—William Randolph Hearst.

"Say, do you know I believe Fortney will be sent to St. Louis just as sure—say! just as sure as I am 12 years older than John."—James Musser.

"It will indeed take skillful maneuvering on the part of the helmsmen of the other craft in the race to overcome their handicap."—Sir Thomas Lipton.

"The competitors of Mr. Fortney will need strenuous leaders to conduct their campaigns."—President Roosevelt.

"I will place all the transportation facilities of the Pennsylvania railroad system at the command of the winner!"—D. M. Meredith.

"Since the battle of Santiago I have never seen such courage as was displayed by Mr. Fortney and his lieutenants in launching this great undertaking. The other participants in the fight should avoid a retrograde movement at all hazards."—Rear Admiral Winfield Scott Schley.

"Just now I am too busy getting in my spring crops to say anything for publication about the World's Fair contest."—Wm. Jennings Bryan.

Mr. W. A. Sickel in speaking to Mr. Fortney said:—

"If you want to be at the top, my son, 'DeWitts' Early Risers' are what you need. I have them here for 25 cents a box."

"I would rather be the leader of Mr. Fortney's forces in the teachers' contest than have the honor of beating the Japs tomorrow."—Gen. Kuropatkin,

"What is man, that he, in his fallibility, should be permitted to control so vast a number of votes as Mr. Fortney apparently controls?"—Edward Everett Hale.

"As you are doubtless aware, my engineer corps is composed of experts from all parts of the United States—and Hungary. I offer its services to Mr. Fortney to determine the shortest route for him to take to go to St. Louis."—Logan M. Kelley.

There, now! does your mind grasp some idea of the greatness of the difficulty that must be overcome by the other teachers if they would expect to win? But the worst is yet to be looked forward to and dreaded. Suppose that Pine Glen throws all its support over to Mr. Fortney.—and we suspect it will—that would be the final crushing blow that would severe the cord that holds hope in the hearts of the ones who had tried hardest to win the coveted prize. Mayhap Providence will interfere—not much ground for hope in that direction though. Better consult some patent medicine man—they can do anything, you know—maybe hypnotize the ballot box.

CENTRE HALL.

Last week was a notable week in Centre Hall for weddings. On Tuesday morning Ward K. The second wedding was that of Chas. D. Bartholemew and Miss Annie Lutz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lutz. The groom is the clerk in the Penn's Valley Bank. The wedding took place on Thursday at high twelve. Rev. A. J. LATHAM DEAD.

Was a Well Known Engineer on The P. R. R.

Alonzo J. Latham died at the home of S. C. Lightner and family, at Tyrone at twenty minutes before 3 o'clock Saturday morning. He suffered from general disability. It will be remembered that he was seriously injured in a wreck at the Deep Fill eighteen or twenty years ago. He never fully recovered from the injuries then sustained. His wife, who was Miss Hendereon, of Howard, died in Tyrone about eight years ago, and he had made his home with Mr. and Mrs. Lightner the past seven years. He was aged 70 years, 3 months and 9 days.

Mr. Latham had an eventful life since his birth on the 21st of January, 1834, at St. Albans, Vt. His parents were Andrew and Elizabeth (Barrett) Latham, of good and true old New England stock. His only near relatives now living are a sister and her son, who reside in New Hampshire. Mr. Latham first began to railroad as a fireman in 1851 and ran from Worchester, Mass., to Nashua, New Hampshire. But in 1853 he left the railroad temporarily to serve as a sailor on a whale ship, going round Cape Horn. Leaving Honolula in 1857 he arrived at New Bedford on the New England shore again in March, 1858. After that he railroaded for a short time then again became a sailor, this time in the Paraguayan expedition in the same year, on the frigate Sabine commanded by Captain Henry Adams, of Philadelphia. Returning to New York, he next went down the gulf after the notorious filibuster, William H. Walker. Next he landed in Mexico, and returning in 1861 to the Flordia coast he was in the party that guarded the landing of 1200 Union soldiers at Fort Pickens and helped mount the guns in the fort. Arriving in New Hampshire on July 4, he was discharged from his service as a sailor on the 12th of July, 1861.

Mr. Latham then returned to railroading as his permanent calling. He retired the 21st of last January in his 70th year.

Deceased was well known all along the Bald Eagle Valley, Tyrone and Clearfield and Lewisburg and Tyrone railroads.

Next to his wife, while she lived, and his business calling, he was devoted to the order of Free and accepted Masons. He was a member of Tyrone lodge of that order since the year 1872, was a continuous trustee since the year 1887, and served the lodge as its worshipful master in the year 1878.

The funeral was held last Monday afternoon. Services at the Lightner home at 2 o'clock by Rev. George T. Gunter. The ceremonies were in charge of Tyrone Lodge, F., and A. M. Interment at Tyrone cemetery.

Williams, the Minority Leader Presents a Resolution Complimentary to Speaker Cannon.

DEMONSTRATION IN THE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, April 29.—The closing Thursday of the second session of the House of the Fifty-eighth Congress was made notable by the demonstration which was evoked by a resolution offered by Mr. Williams, the minority leader, testifying to the courtesy and impartial manner in which Speaker Cannon had presided over the House. The resolution was not of the perfunctory kind, but was expressive of the kindly feeling which men in the House of all parties entertained toward him. In a graceful speech the Speaker declared his appreciation of the resolution.

Many conference reports were agreed to on bills which had been in dispute between the two houses. The only debate of any importance was on the bill providing for the restoration to the naval academy of three cadets who had been dismissed for hazing, the House voting overwhelmingly against it.

The members, after the Speaker announced final adjournment, joined in singing patriotic airs and slowly filed out of the hall, after shaking hands with the Speaker and bidding him good-by.

With brief announcement and a sharp rap of his well-worked gavel, President Pro Tem. Frye adjourned the Senator eine die at 2 p. m. Thursday, the hour fixed by resolution of the two houses o Congress. The occurrence was devoid of unusual incident, and the final close of the session was but slightly different from the end of an ordinary day's sitting. The work of the session had been concluded before the final word was said, so that neither rush nor confusion marked the end.

The Senate began its day's work at 10:30 o'clock a. m., but the greater part of the time was devoted to a political debate, participated in on the Republican side by Messrs. Allison and Aldrich, and on the Democratic side by Messrs. Gorman and Culberson. The discussion was based on a statement by Mr. Allison, of the appropriations for the session, comparing the figures for this year and for the administration of President Roosevelt with those of other years and other administrations.

The President and his Cabinet occupied the President's Capital office room during a part of the debate, and some of the President's advisers were among the most interested listeners to the criticism and defense of their chief. Mrs. Roosevelt and other members of the President's family occupied seats in the gallery towards the close of the session, and they, too, found entertainment in the proceedings.

The only important acts of legislation during the day were the presentation and acceptance of conference reports on the Panama canal government and emergency river and harbor bills. Neither report aroused debate.

The galleries were not greatly crowded at any time during the day.

TIME IS THE TEST.

The Testimony of Bellefonte People Stands the Test.

The test of time is what tells. "A new broom sweeps clean" but will it wear well is what interests most. The public soon finds out when misrepresentations are made and merit alone will stand the test of time. Bellefonte people appreciate merit and many months ago local citizens publicly endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills; they do so still. Would a citizen make the statement which follows unless convinced that the article was just as represented? A cure that lasts is the kind that every sufferer from kidney ills is looking for.

James Rine, of High street, employed in the planing mill, says: "I can speak as highly now of Doan's Kidney Pills as I did years ago my case is pretty good evidence that the cures made by them are not temporary. I have not had any of the severe pains in my back since I used Doan's Kidney Pills while before I could not put on my shoes and could hardly drag myself around. Though I have had slight touches of backache, it never amounted to much, I have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills to hundreds of people and I know of those who have had the greatest relief from suffering by using them. I can say they are reliable and permanent in their effects."

THE DAY'S OUTING.

What to take With One for a Day's Bicycle Ride or Drive. Small Afternoon Tea Equipage. How to Carry a Change of Clothing in Small Space.

BY CHRISTINE TERHUNE HERRICK,
Author of "Cradle and Nursery," "First Aid to the Young Housekeepers," "Housekeeping Made Easy," "What to Eat," "In City Tents,

(Copyright, 1904, by Christine Herrick.)

Long days spent in the open air are becoming more and more a feature of our Summer life. No more do we consider a picnic a rare function that occurs but once or twice in the season. Instead we take it as a matter of course and make little fuss about it.

Several reasons may be given for this. We are turning more and more to Nature for our rest time and are learning to appreciate what a benefit there is in pure, fresh air. We long to get into the woods and fields and away from the city,—even the most devoted cockneys among us. Also, we have learned new ways of doing this. The bicyclists explore all the country within reach and the trolley has made access to rural joys easy for the dwellers in cities. We do not have to hire a horse and wagon when we wish to put the town behind us for a few hours.

When such outings as these are to be a matter of frequent occurrence it is a mistake to plan that they should be too elaborate. Then they become a burden. The woman who has tired herself out with preparations for a day's rest, feels, by the time she is ready to start that she is so weary she would rather stay at home than go anywhere in the world. To guard against this there should be certain stock arrangements made once for all and the means thus devised should be always on hand.

In the first place there should be a picnic basket. The ideal of this is the beautifully made tea-basket or lunch basket of the English, but the cost of this puts it beyond the reach of most persons. We would not be Yankees and ingenious if we could not manage a substitute. It may not be so elegant but it will serve the purpose as well. A good sized basket with a cover and a stout handle should be selected and if the fittings for this can be attached to the inside of the basket by stout rubber or elastic bands, so much the better. If not, they can be packed in as best one may. Such fittings should, when possible, be of aluminum, because of the lightness of this, but tin can be used or anyone of the light metal wares that are on the market.

First among these fittings should be a couple of boxes with tightly fitted lids. If they cannot be procured, paste-board boxes will serve. The advantage of the metal boxes is that their contents keep moist and fresh. One of these receptacles will hold sandwiches, another cold meat, if this is taken, or if not, cake and other sweets. In addition to these boxes there should be drinking cups of some light metal,—glass and china are to heavy—and a set of ordinary knives, forks and spoons that are kept for this purpose alone and will be no great loss if they come to grief. When plates are needed the light ones of wood or paper that are used by grocers will answer admirably, and plenty of these should always be in the house. There should also be a supply of Japanese napkins on hand. None of the articles belonging to the picnic outfit should ever be used for any other purpose. On the return from the outing the fittings of the basket should be put in order, and basket and contents set away until the time of the next expedition.

This is the kind of outfit to have for a boating and fishing excursion, or for a trolley picnic, when one goes by car to some distant point. If there is to be a good sized party it is better to have several baskets of small or medium capacity than one or two that are large and heavy. Divide the burden as much as possible. For such excursions there should be provided also a heavy railway or travelling rug or shawl, that will do to spread on the grass for a seat. The young persons of the party may not need it but it will be pleasant for the older picnickers to feel that they may be sparing themselves an attack of rheumatism.

A tablecloth may also be taken along and the commissariat may be extensive. Sandwiches, bread and butter, rolls or biscuit, cold meat, hard boiled or stuffed eggs, salad, cakes, fruit, among the solids, cold coffee or tea, ginger ale, root beer or lemonade for drinkables. Any or all of these are satisfactory if the picnic is to have for an object a berrying or fishing party, a nutting frolic, a clam bake or something else of the sort. For such occasions, when a fire is possible it is well to take along a certain quantity of uncooked provisions,—as indeed is necessary at a clam bake,—like potatoes, sweet and white, corn, apples and so forth, while the coffee or tea may be heated over the fire.

Far different is the sort of provision that is to be made for a bicycling party. the members of this must not entangle themselves with the cares of this life to the extent of loading themselves with heavy baskets. They must travel light and depend upon roadhouses and farmers for the bulk of their meals. Yet some things they will be wise to take with them and the experienced in cycling trips have made out a plan by which they can supply themselves not only with food but with a change of garments if a long ride is in contemplation. This is done without assuming a load that would be bulky or heavy enough to cause them annoyance.

One man who has lived enough in England to become devoted to his cup of afternoon tea, never starts out on a ride that will take him all day without his tea equipage. So ingenious is its arrangement that many a woman rider has imitated it. The cost is small and the outfit simple. The combination that is sold under the name of a "pocket stove," by druggists serves for hot water kettle, teapot, and cup and saucer. The cup in which the water is boiled is of tin or lacquer. Into this is fitted the small alcohol lamp, with the tripod on which the cup is set while the water is heating. A silver tea ball holds the tea. When the lamp has been lighted—a two ounce phial full is enough alcohol to boil the kettle twice—the water from a wayside spring or stream is set to boil. As soon as the boiling point is reached the flame is extinguished and the tea ball dropped into the cup and left there until the infusion is of the desired strength. This especial tea-drinker is independent of cream or sugar,—which is an advantage, under the circumstances.

Still another beverage is possible to the owner of this outfit. The beef tea capsules which are put up by two or three good firms and which dissolve when put in hot water, produce an excellent beef tea that is within the reach of a cyclist who has a "pocket stove."

The package can be securely swung under the saddle of the wheel or attached to the handle bars.

A lunch is less easy to take, although one may be put into a paste-board box that can be thrown away after the meal is disposed of. Those walkers who have tramped in Switzerland and elsewhere know the advantage to be found in a supply of sweet chocolate, which is nourishment in so condensed a form that if one has bread and chocolate a long walk can be taken without faintness, even if no other food is attainable. Anyone who prefers cocoa or chocolate as a drink to tea may put a small portion of the prepared cocoa in place of the tea, when he packs his "pocket stove" outfit.

I have spoken of the possibility of carrying a change of garments with one on a bicycle trip. Everyone who has covered much of the country on horseback knows that a good deal can be put in a rubber covered roll attached to the back of the saddle, or that a good deal may be carried in saddle bags. Something of the same sort may be achieved by the bicycle rider who enjoys going off for an over night trip. This is a delightful method of making an excursion, since it enables one to have the comfort of travelling late in the afternoon and early in the morning and spares one the heat of the middle of the day.

The best receptable for such luggage as a woman will carry on a bicycling trip that extends over more than one day is a hold-all made in shape like a large envelope—say fourteen inches long by twelve in width. A good material is cravenette or some other water proof cloth. This may be lined with linen. When it is full it may be rolled into a compact bundle and hung by a strap from under the saddle or from the handle bar, and when it is empty it is a small parcel that can be tucked into a pocket.

Into such a case as this may go the woman rider's nainsook nightdress, a change of gauze underwear, a ribbed undervest she can put on if it turns cold, although the sweater usually takes the place of this,—an extra stock or two or a few clean collars, handkerchiefs and stockings, and even a soft silk waist with which to make a change at the end of the day. A small set of toilet belongings also, comb, tooth brush orangewood stick, powder bag and a tiny jar of cold cream may go with them and there will even be found space for a spool of thread, needles, scissors and thimble.

Thus supplied any woman may feel herself ready to go off for two or three days riding, with no fear of discomfort. A party that is well planned and suitably chaperoned will find there are not many pleasanter ways of spending a brief holiday than on a trip of this sort. Now that it seems to be an accomplished fact that every woman who is not actually infirm or otherwise incapacitated will ride a bicycle this Summer there is a peculiar interest in planning outings of this sort. Whatever form they take, on two wheels or on four, in a trolley car or a boat, they can not fail to be a success if they mean refreshment and renewal of strength to over-strenuous women and men.

Transfer Your Policies.

Insurance policy holders who change their residence should see that they have their papers transferred, else they may lose their indemnity in case of fire. When goods are insured it is done for a certain locality, and if the policies be removed and lost elsewhere, the companies are not responsible. All a client needs to do is to take his papers to the agent's office and have the papers transferred. Such a course may save the policyholder a great deal of money.

BRIEF MENTION

Short Items of Local Interest Gathered By The Way Side

—There are men who wouldn't dare read the declaration of independence to their wives.

—The sweet girl graduate is already commencing to worry over her commencement frock.

—There are some side walks in town that need repairing, or better still, replaced by new ones.

—Farming building operations and all kinds of outdoor work are greatly retarded by the cold, rainy weather.

—When a man admits that his wife is an angel its safe to ask him how long he has been a widower.

—When you employ a lawyer to look after your interest, he generally looks after the principal too.

—The next session of the Huntingdon Presbytery will be held at Clearfield on the 28th of June.

—The Standard Steel Company, at Birnham, recently got an order from Japan for five engines.

—The fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Republican party will be celebrated this fall.

—Bold robbers Sunday night carried two wagon loads of flour from the warehouse of J. L. Robb, at Wellsboro, and safely got away.

—Three Renovo boys have just been arrested and fined $300 for catching and having in their possession thirty trout under six inches in size.

—The congregation of St. Paul's Reformed church, Lancaster, Rev. Dr. J. W. Meminger, pastor, Sunday dedicated its new $100,000 place of worship.

—It is said that Hon. W. C. Arnold, of DuBois, former Congressman from this district, who is in Illinois for his health, is very much improved.

—The Bellefonte Castle No. 359 Knights of the Golden Eagle will hold a memorial service for their dead in the Lutheran church Sunday morning May 15.

—St. Paul's A. M. E., church held quite a successful rally among their own members Sunday, and the sum of $148 was raised for the parsonage fund. The sermon was preached by Rev. S. A. Lewis of Altoona.

—The engagement of Miss Ethel Todd, daughter of Mrs. Susan Todd, of Philipsburg, to Dr. John W. Faucette, of Ashville, N. C., has been announced. The wedding will take place in August.

—While Rev. J. E. Morris was administering to the spiritual wants of his flock in St. Paul's A. M. E. church Sunday evening about 9 o'clock, the busy stork paid a visit to the parsonage and left the Reverend a bright and interesting little baby daughter. Accept our best wishes.

A YOUNG FORGER.

Attempt to Work J. H. Reeser's Check on First National Bank.

Wednesday about half past eleven a young man apparently about sixteen years of age presented a check at the First National Bank of Bellefonte for $22.78 purported to be signed by J. H. Reeser, a well known resident of Snow Shoe. Assistant Cashier Mose Montgomery, to whom the check was presented, is familiar with Mr. Reeser's handwriting, and at once detected the fact that the check was a forgery and a very clumsy one at that. He asked the boy some questions and he gave his name as Benner that his home was at Saxton, Pa., and that he had been visiting out at Snow Shoe. Mr. Montgomery did not cash the check but went to the telephone to call Reeser. The boy did not wait but started out the door on a run. Bank clerk J. K. Barnhart and Janitor Paul Jones attempted to catch the young forger but without success and it is safe to say he will give Bellefonte a wide berth in the future.
